NASHVILLE, Tenn. – (January 9, 2008) – Beth Alexander will join the CapStar Bank (In Organization) team February 1 to lead its community and investor relations efforts. Alexander currently serves as editor and publisher of NFocus magazine.

“I am thrilled about the opportunity to work with the CapStar Bank team,” said Alexander. “The team really embodies a community bank mentality and is committed to serving its local clients and the city at large. I believe CapStar will make a huge impact on Nashville and its thriving business community.”

Alexander’s role at CapStar will be multi-faceted. In addition to developing and strengthening relationships with the bank’s investors, she will also serve as a private banker. She will also direct CapStar’s community relations and charitable giving efforts.

“Beth will be a tremendous asset to CapStar,” said Claire Tucker, bank president and chief executive officer. “Her extensive involvement in and commitment to the Nashville community will help CapStar cultivate strong business relationships. She possesses many personal and professional attributes that will be ideal for community and investor relations, as well as private banking.”

Alexander worked for Bank of America for several years before moving to the United Way of Metro Nashville as its vice president of major gifts. She left the United Way to join NFocus as its managing editor in 2001 and has been the magazine’s editor and publisher since 2002.
